

BIO

Shemeka Kim Peters, certified coach, professional speaker, career educator, and trainer is also the author of the Reaching Your Career Dreams advice blog and creator of the ACED•IT™ method approach to career planning. As a lifelong learner, Shemeka received her B.S. from Syracuse University, and studied personal and life coaching at New York University. She is currently pursuing her Masters of Science in Adult Education and Human Resource Development at Fordham University with a concentration in workforce development. Her accomplishments have earned her recognition from the Who's Who among American Colleges and Universities and various organizations including the media.

Shemeka is especially well qualified to speak to career and professional development with firsthand knowledge and experience in the fast-paced New York City work-lifestyle and fashion industry. During her career as a technical fashion designer, she worked for high profile companies including Liz Claiborne, Polo Ralph Lauren, and Jones Apparel Group.

Shemeka has been professionally known as "The Career Stylist" for some years due to her ability to help clients discover their career dreams, and develop a unique pathway for its successful attainment. Shemeka continues to exemplify the ability to design and reach her own dreams as the founder and CEO of Divine Vessels Empowerment, and writing her first book.
